

ICA Field Services Division

Since its inception nearly sixty years ago, the ICA's mission has included dissemination of knowledge about cultural heritage preservation.

The ICA offers outreach and education for anyone in need of instruction in conservation topics. Field Services staff work with institutions and the public to determine preservation training needs and develop a range of educational offerings to address those needs. Typical programming includes hands-on workshops, symposia, and lecture series.

The Field Services Division also provides low- and no-cost outreach services including on-site surveys, disaster response and mitigation, and grant assistance.
